

Acorn Weekly

January 29 to
February 2, 2023

We had an incredible field trip to Riverfront Regional Park! We traversed a “river”, visited the actual river and tossed in dirt balls, learned that some plants are poisonous (Poison Hemlock was picked and identified), climbed in the Redwoods, played in a stick fort, made fairy houses, worked on documenting our trip in our journals, and were in awe of the trees. We could have stayed forever.

Looking at Literacy...
We started a new story, We're Going on a Bear Hunt, this week. We are finding many ways to play with the story to build literacy skills. We read, created collages, danced to the song, and tried out our new felt board story.

We haven't forgotten about Traction Man! In fact, we even added a second to our class. He has been going on lots of adventures! We created a waiting list to make sure everyone got a turn and this encouraged lots of name writing (just a little teacher trick).

What will you do when it rains? This is my most asked question... This is what we did on the stormiest day this week. We still went out, but we may have come in a little early as well. We also came in on Thursday when the thunder started rolling up above us, but we were amazed watching and listening to the storm roll in!
